

Dear Soldier,

My name is Alex and I'm in 7th grade, after learning about World War II I'm amazed what troops have to go through. I wanted to thank you for your service, I'm not a military family so I do not know what it is like to see my mother/father go away every couple of months. But I saw a video on Youtube about a man who was in the service, he said that you should use your time in the service to go places you've never been and see things you've never seen. Ready for the cheesy part? In everyone's mind, even the bullies, deep down they know you are a hero, so is everyone standing around you. You fight for your country, everyone on your base is a Captain America in their own way (without tights or a little shield). Please right back so I know someone got this.
